

Statement released by Kmart:

"At Kmart, the safety of our customers is a top priority. We regret that expired pain relievers were on our store's shelves. We have policies and procedures to ensure that product is removed from our shelves as it approaches its expiration date. In our stores surrounding the Portsmouth area, we reviewed these policies and procedures with our associates, and we checked the products on the shelves to ensure that any expired or short dated product has been handled according to our policy. It is never acceptable for expired pain relievers to be on our shelves."
